

EDUQAS A LEVEL R.S. COMPONENT 2 : A Study of Philosophy of Religion YR 2

Specification Theme 2 Challenges to religious belief

D) Religious belief as a product of the human mind – Sigmund Freud

Religion as an illusion and/or a neurosis with reference to collective neurosis; primal horde; Oedipus complex; wish fulfilment and reaction against helplessness.

Supportive evidence including reference to redirection of guilt complexes and reference to instinctive desires deriving from evolutionary basis (Charles Darwin).

Challenges including lack of anthropological evidence for primal horde; no firm psychological evidence for universal Oedipus complex; evidence basis too narrow.

Guidance for Teaching:

This section provides candidates with an opportunity to consider and reflect on Freud's key ideas in relation to religious belief. It also includes reference to supportive evidence found elsewhere in modern psychology regarding the redirection of guilt complexes, however it is not expected that candidates have a detailed knowledge of the psychology of this, just an appreciation that the modern theories support Freud's original assertions. References to Darwin are to be treated similarly, i.e. an appreciation of Darwin's ideas of evolution through natural selection as a process of growing towards maturity as human beings – having the ability to sublimate the instincts of the individual in the interests of maintaining social cohesion. Candidates should also consider the challenges to Freud's view contained within the specification e.g. lack of anthropological evidence, etc.

Useful resources

Essential Resources for teaching (Overview)

If you want a quick overview to the subject that is board-specific, simply start with the Eduqas scheme of work which can be found on the digital resources site – see Resources – digital. This has ideas and suggested activities for students. There are some excellent resources in the digital resources (see the second and third bullet points below) which develop the discussion points. Finally, Jordan, Lockyer and Tate offer detailed information see Resources – Book. To introduce AO2 themes OR to develop AO2 skills, you may want to introduce students to the books listed by Michael Palmer and Anthony Storr.

Books:

Philosophy of Religion for A-Level - Jordan, Lockyer and Tate (Nelson Thornes, 2002, ASIN: B01HC1HAJ8) Chapter 9 - outlines on the views held by Freud in relation to religion. It sets out the key elements clearly, using a bullet point system and highlighted key concepts. There are plenty of discussion questions.

Freud and Jung on Religion - Michael Palmer (Routledge, 1997, ISBN-10: 0415147476) - the first section analyses Freud's claim relating to religion as a neurosis. The second section considers Jung's rejection of Freud's claims. A useful resource which needs no prior knowledge to access.

Anthony Storr, Freud: A Very Short Introduction (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2001, ISBN-10: 0192854550).

Digital:

- <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=1U440mcsebE> - a lively discussion of Freud's thinking on religion. Makes cultural links and uses imagery to support and explain key concepts.

Specification Theme 2 Challenges to religious belief

E) Religious belief as a product of the human mind - Carl Jung

Religion necessary for personal growth with reference to: collective unconscious; individuation; archetypes; the God within.

Supportive evidence including recognition of religion as a source of comfort and promotion of positive personal and social mindsets arising from religious belief.

Challenges including lack of empirical evidence for Jungian concepts and reductionist views regarding religious belief arising from acceptance of Jung's ideas.

Guidance for Teaching:

Candidates have with an opportunity to consider and reflect on Jung's key ideas in relation to religious belief. They should also make reference to supportive evidence from modern psychology, particularly relating to mind-sets as a way of viewing the world that provides a reality for both the individual and the collective. Candidates should also consider the challenges to Jung's view contained within the specification e.g. lack of empirical evidence to support Jungian concepts, etc.

Specification Theme 2 Challenges to religious belief

C) Issues relating to rejection of religion - Atheism

Rejection of belief in deities; the difference between agnosticism and atheism; the rise of New Atheism (antitheism); its main criticisms of religion: non-thinking; infantile worldview; impedes scientific progress.

Religious responses to the challenge of New Atheism: rejection by religious groups of New Atheist claims regarding incompatibility of science and religion; increase in fundamentalist religious activity relating to morality and community; increase in religious apologists in media.

Guidance for Teaching:

Candidates need to explain how more recent movements have arisen as a rejection of religion. They will need to clearly understand the philosophical differences between agnosticism and atheism and be able to explain the reasons behind the rise of New Atheism. Candidates should also demonstrate awareness of the stated responses to New Atheism and be able to articulate why these responses have occurred. Consideration of New Atheist apologists such as Harris' The End of Faith (Simon & Schuster), Dawkins' The God Delusion (Black Swan) Dennett's Breaking the Spell (Penguin) and Hitchens' God is not Great (Atlantic Books) will be useful for centres in preparing candidates for this area of the specification, although a question will never be set on any particular apologist for the movement

Useful resources

If you want a quick overview to the subject that is board-specific, simply start with the Eduqas overview which can be found on the digital resources site. This has ideas and suggested activities for students. There are further excellent resources on Eduqas digital resource website - (see the second, third, fourth and fifth bullet points) which develop the discussion points. There is a wide range of articles and clips discussing this subtheme. To introduce AO2 themes OR to develop AO2 skills, you may want to introduce students to The Dawkins Delusion - Alister McGrath and Joanna Collicutt McGrath (SPCK, 2007). See Resources - Books.

Books:

Alistair McGrath and Joanna Collicutt McGrath, The Dawkins Delusion (London: SPCK, 2007, ISBN 0281059276) – an evaluation of the ideas of Richard Dawkins regarding religion. Asks important questions about the relationship between science and religion.

Specification Theme 3 Religious experience

D) The influence of religious experience on religious practice and faith

Value for religious community including: affirmation of belief system; promotion of faith value system; strengthening cohesion of religious community.

Value for individual including faith restoring; strengthening faith in face of opposition; renewal of commitment to religious ideals and doctrines.

Guidance for Teaching:

Candidates should demonstrate both knowledge and understanding of the value of religious experiences for religious communities in this section. Key to this section is the use of pertinent exemplification from one or more religious traditions. Demonstrating understanding of how various experiences can validate the tradition for the community is required. Centres may wish to refer to such events as the appearance of key religious figures in visions as one such example of the affirmation of a belief system. Equally the experience of a miraculous event may also be used to show the effect on the believing community in terms of strengthening community cohesion. In terms of considering the influence of religious experience on the individual, candidates should be able to explain how such experiences can strengthen the individual's faith (as in the case of mystical experiences) or reaffirm commitment to religious ideals or doctrines (as may occur in a conversion or religious renewal experience). Candidates are not expected to provide lengthy theoretical explanations of the religious experiences – the focus is on the influence of such experiences on religious practice and faith.

Useful resources

If you want a quick overview to the subject that is board-specific, simply start with the Eduqas overview which can be found on the digital resources site. This has ideas and suggested activities for students. Jordan, Lockyer and Tate offer detailed information and Mel Thompson and Peter Vardy offer very informative and readable resources (see Resources for Teaching – Books).

To introduce AO2 themes OR to develop AO2 skills, you may want to introduce students to the discussion by Dr. William Lane Craig (see Digital – YouTube help).

Books:

Philosophy of Religion for A-Level - Jordan, Lockyer and Tate (Nelson Thornes, 2002, ISBN 0748743391) Chapter 6 – A useful resource. It sets out the key elements clearly, using a bullet point system and highlighted key concepts. There are plenty of discussion questions.

Specification Theme 3 Religious experience

E) Miracles the definitions of St Thomas Aquinas (miracles different from the usual order), David Hume (transgression of a law of nature), R.F. Holland (contingency miracle), Richard Swinburne (religious significance). Consideration of reasons why religious believers accept that miracles occur: evidence from sacred writings; affirmation of faith traditions; personal experience.

Guidance for Teaching:

Candidates are required to explain clearly how miracles are variously defined by a number of different philosophers. Candidates have an opportunity to appreciate how ideas about what defines a miracle have developed over time and they should be able to identify and explain these developments. Candidates should have an understanding of Aquinas' views on miracles, how they are events that go beyond the usually observed order of nature, but that they are not completely contrary to nature as they are considered to be in accord with the universal order of nature as ordained by God. They should also appreciate that Hume's definition was a development of this, in that he held all claims of miracle as being transgressions of the laws of nature. Furthermore the definitions of Holland - in terms of miracles being equated to coincidences and Swinburne - that miracles must have religious significance to be properly termed such, each demonstrate properties that will support or deny the claim that miracles can occur.

Useful resources

If you want a quick overview to the subject that is board-specific, simply start with the Eduqas overview which can be found on the digital resources site. This has ideas and suggested activities for students. Jordan, Lockyer and Tate offer detailed information, and Mel Thompson and Peter Vardy offer very informative and readable resources (see Resources - Books).

Specification Theme 3 Religious experience

F) A comparative study of two key scholars from within and outside the Christian tradition and their contrasting views on the possibility of miracles

David Hume - his scepticism of miracles including challenges relating to testimony-based belief; credibility of witnesses; susceptibility of belief; contradictory nature of faith claims.

Richard Swinburne - his defence of miracles, including definitions of natural laws and contradictions of Hume's arguments regarding contradictory nature of faith claims and credibility of witnesses.

Guidance for Teaching:

In this section, candidates need to be able to apply the knowledge gained in 2B and demonstrate an understanding of how Hume's and Swinburne's views can be compared, and what they reveal about the understanding of miracles from both within and outside the Christian tradition. It is expected that candidates will have a detailed knowledge and understanding of the views on miracles from both philosophers such that a comparison between them can clearly be made.

Limitations of language for traditional conceptions of God such as infinite and timeless; challenge to sacred texts and religious pronouncements as unintelligible; challenge that religious language is not a common shared base and experience; the differences between cognitive and non-cognitive language.

Guidance for Teaching:

Candidates should be able to explain why religious language is considered to contain inherent problems and what these particular problems are. Candidates should show knowledge and understanding of the traditional concepts of God and why these present difficulties for philosophers due to the limitations of human language which is based on the finite experience of human beings. Candidates should also demonstrate clear understanding of the differences between cognitive and non-cognitive forms of language and be able to explain what the implications of these differences are for an understanding of religious language.

Specification Theme 4 Religious Language

B) Religious language as cognitive, but meaningless

Logical Positivism – Verification by Alfred J. Ayer (A.J. Ayer) – religious ethical language as meaningless; there can be no way in which we could verify the truth or falsehood of the propositions (e.g. God is good, murder is wrong); falsification nothing can counter the belief (Antony Flew).

Criticisms of verification: the verification principle cannot itself be verified; neither can historical events; universal scientific statements; the concept of eschatological verification goes against this.

Criticisms of falsification: Richard Hare – bliks (the way that a person views the world gives meaning to them even if others do not share the same view); Basil Mitchell – partisan and the stranger (certain things can be meaningful even when they cannot be falsified); Richard Swinburne – toys in the cupboard (concept meaningful even though falsifying the statement is not possible).

Guidance for Teaching:

Candidates should be able to explain clearly how they understand religious language to be a cognitive but meaningless form of language. They should be able to explain the general aims of Logical Positivism, in terms of the consideration of religious language, with particular reference to the principles of verification and falsification in this and show clear understanding of how these two principles can be used to demonstrate that religious language is considered to be meaningless. Candidates are also expected to be able to show how each of the aspects of these principles have been challenged by religious philosophers and explain these challenges through the concept of ‘Bliks’ (Hare) as well as through the examples of the partisan and the stranger (Mitchell) and the ‘Toys in the Cupboard’ (Swinburne).

Specification Theme 4 Religious Language

C) Religious language as non-cognitive and analogical

Proportion and attribution (St Thomas Aquinas) and qualifier and disclosure (Ian Ramsey).

Challenges including how far analogies can give meaningful insights into religious language.

A consideration of how these two views (Aquinas/Ramsey) can be used to help understand religious teachings.

Guidance for Teaching:

In this section, candidates should be able to explain how the work of Aquinas and Ramsay has demonstrated that the function of religious language is better understood as non-cognitive. Candidates should be able to show how Aquinas rejected univocal and equivocal language in favour of analogical language as a more appropriate form of language to talk about, and thereby gain a deeper understanding, of God. A clear understanding of what Aquinas meant by analogy of proportion and attribution is expected. Candidates should also show how Ramsay in the twentieth century, developed Aquinas ideas concerning the use of analogy, and by referring to languages in terms of models and qualifiers. Candidates should also be prepared to explain the various challenges raised against analogical language as a meaningful form of language to express religious beliefs and ideas.

Specification Theme 4 Religious Language

D) Religious language as non-cognitive and symbolic

Functions of symbols (John Randall); God as that which concerns us ultimately (Paul Tillich). Challenges including whether a symbol is adequate or gives the right insights. A consideration of how these two views (Randall/Tillich) can be used to help understand religious teachings.

Guidance for Teaching:

This section requires candidates to develop further their understanding of religious language as non-cognitive, by being able to explain how Randall (function) and Tillich (ultimate concern) refer to the use of symbolic language as an appropriate form for providing a deeper and more meaningful understanding of religious beliefs and concepts. Centres are advised to use appropriate exemplification from one or more religious traditions to assist candidates in explaining the ideas of Randall and Tillich. Candidates should also be prepared to explain the various challenges raised against symbolic language as a meaningful form of language to express religious beliefs and ideas.

Specification Theme 4 Religious Language

E) Religious language as non-cognitive and mythical

Complex form of mythical language that communicates values and insights into purpose of existence.

Supportive evidence – different forms of myths to convey meaning; creation myths; myths of good against evil; heroic myths. Myths help to overcome fears of the unknown; myths effective way of transmitting religious, social and ethical values.

Challenges: problem of competing myths; meanings of myths change over time as they reflect the values of society as societal constructs; demythologisation of myths results in varying interpretations, myths often incompatible with scientific understanding of the world.

Guidance for Teaching:

Similarly to 4D in section 4E candidates should be able to explain how, as a form of non-cognitive language, religious language can be understood as mythical. Again, centres are advised to use appropriate exemplification from one or more religious tradition to assist candidates in explaining the way in which mythical language communicates values and insights into the purpose of existence and therefore serves a similar function to religious language. Candidates should also be prepared to explain the various challenges raised against mythical language as a meaningful form of language to express religious beliefs and ideas.

EDUQAS A LEVEL R.S. COMPONENT 2 : A Study of Philosophy of Religion YR 2

Specification Theme 4 Religious Language

F) Religious language as a language game

Meaningful to people who participate in same language game (Ludwig Wittgenstein).

Supportive evidence – non-cognitive form of language provides meaning to participants within language game; consider use of language not meaning; language games fit with coherence theory of truth; religious language as expressions of belief.

Challenges, including rejection of any true propositions in religion that can be empirically verified; does not allow for meaningful conversations between different groups of language users; does not provide adequate meaning for the word ‘God’.

Guidance for Teaching:

Candidates should be able to explain how religious language is a language game that is representative of a particular form of life. Wittgenstein’s theory of language should be explained in terms of his development from ‘picture language’ to a form of language which was specific to a particular activity in life, and therefore meaningful to those involved in the game. Candidates should refer to appropriate exemplification to illustrate Wittgenstein’s theory as well as appropriate supporting evidence, including the coherence theory of truth. Vardy’s Puzzle of God, Chapter 2 (William Collins) has a useful introduction to this. Candidates should also be prepared to explain the various challenges to Wittgenstein’s language games.

Useful resources

If you want a quick overview to the subject that is board-specific, simply start with the WJEC overview which can be found on the digital resources site. This has ideas and suggested activities for students. The resources found in Resources - Books (below) offer excellent overviews, summaries and revision focus on the issue. There are some excellent videos as well as a podcast on Ludwig Wittgenstein (see YouTube help). To introduce AO2 themes or to develop AO2 skills the Philosophy Ninja clip is excellent on Language Games (see YouTube help) and there are further excellent and accessible articles and pdfs discussing the issues, see Resources - digital).

Books:

WJEC/Eduqas Religious Studies for A level Year 2 and A2 Philosophy of Religion – Peter Cole and Karl Lawson (Illuminate, 2018, ISBN 191120839X), Chapter 4 – board endorsed and goes through each aspect of the specification.

WJEC A2 Religious Studies – Study and Revision Guide – Delyth Ellerton-Harris (Illuminate, 2013, ISBN 1908682108), Chapter 2 – this provides knowledge as well as revision through diagrams, examination style questions. The unit summary provides a visual prompt for key knowledge.

Teach Yourself Philosophy of Religion – Mel Thompson (Hodder and Stoughton, 2003, ISBN 0340867574), Chapter 2 – concise and well-structured discussion of the key issues. Very accessible for students.

Philosophy of Religion 1 – Religious Language – Peter Cole and John Lee. (Abacus, 2007, ISBN 1898653054) – a specific A Level book which examines the key issues and features summary diagrams and advice.
